Introduction

These small sided street games have been brought together as a resource for coaches and volunteers working with young players.

Through initiatives such as Positive Coaching Scotland, we have seen a marked improvement in the quality of playing and training environments in recent years. The coaches and parents of the past who shout and yell from the side of the pitch while their kids are just trying to do their best are an increasing minority. Many local clubs have also embraced a 'let them play' philosophy so that young players can benefit more from a positive match experience every weekend. Well done to them.

However.....!

.....Our next challenge to make every Saturday or Sunday morning even better is to help the 'Joystick Coach' or 'Joystick Parent'. These are the folks who constantly provide instruction before every pass, dribble, shot or tackle. This results in the players solving less problems, making fewer decisions, improvising less and having a reduced capacity to express themselves. Many of these adults are actually really good people, have the kid's interests at heart and are very well intentioned.

If we want to develop more players who have the ability to be really good decision makers, we need to back off a bit, give the kids more ownership and perhaps try some of the following;

- Allow mistakes to be made and see if players can learn from them without feedback.
- Instead of providing instructions or answers, try and guide players to solutions by using questions such as
 - How could you get the ball to the wide area quicker?
 - When would it be better to make that pass?
 - What could you do differently next time?
 - Where would be better to go to receive the ball?
- Rotate playing positions so players have various experiences.

The games contained within this booklet all have a problem solving element. They are small sided so players are constantly involved and all the games have that 'spirit of the street' feel about them that helped produce latter day players such as Dave Mackay, Dennis Law and Kenny Dalglish when they were out organising their own street games with friends. If you are a novice coach these games can be used as an alternative to having to design skill practices or sessions. Most importantly, all the activities, we think, are games the kids will want to participate in as opposed to activity they feel they have to take part in.

Set it up. Let them play. Stand back 😊

Why Small Sided Games?

Small Sided games are essential for developing players. They help kids become more engaged which increases activity, confidence, interaction, fitness and contact with the ball. Even when comparing our player pathway formats, Football 4s and Soccer 7s there are quantifiable benefits to keeping it small

Breaking Lines 4 Goal Game

Objective: Find quick ways to score through quick and correct decisions.

Description: Blue team aim to score into the two goals where the blue wall players are situated. Maroon team do the same for the other two goals.
As soon as a goal is scored, the player standing next to the goal drives in and enter play on the attack. The player who scored retrieves his ball and takes the place of the wall player.
If the ball goes out of play the coach feeds a new ball in from the side.

Coaching Points: Create 1v1s and overloads, drive at pace
Look to play ball through defenders
Turn to attack opposite direction when required
Decision making

Progression: Aim to score in the other two goals so the teams have to cope with scoring then transition to defend.
Use bigger goals and include goalkeepers. Wall players can also be used to bounce passes.
